PROVO, UTAH

PREFACE.

The necessity of a new Catalogue of the Library has been apparent for some time, as no complete one has been made for sixteen years. The expense of the undertaking was, however, evidently to be so great that no Board until the present one has felt it safe to undertake such an extensive work. During the administration of the Board of 1864–5 a manuscript Catalogue was commenced, but for some reason was not continued. It was found to be of no material assistance towards the present Catalogue, the work having to be begun anew.

Almost the first act of the present Board was to appoint this Committee, which immediately commenced operations. During June their President visited Cambridge and Boston, for the purpose of examining the system of cataloguing employed at Harvard College and in the public libraries of Boston; and on his return a corps of five cataloguers, under the supervision of the Librarian, went actively to work.

No sufficiently complete record of the accessions and losses of the Library was kept during the sixteen years since the last Catalogue. The first step was therefore to make an inventory of the Library, involving the handling of at least one hundred and fifty thousand volumes, as each book had to be dealt with at least twice. This inventory consists of over sixty thousand cards or slips, in two sets. One of these sets is alphabeted by names of authors, including the titles of anonymous books. The other set contains the titles of the books, and is classed by subjects. These two sets of cards correspond respectively to the Alphabetical Catalogue and the Classified Index in the printed Catalogue, and there is a third set for the Novels.

In preparing this inventory, permanent future economy as well as present convenience was contemplated. The sets of cards referred to, after being copied for the printer, have been preserved in drawers made for the purpose. A regular cataloguing department is to be maintained, and it is intended that no book shall be added to the Library without the addition of the corresponding cards in this card catalogue or inventory, and that all losses and changes shall in like manner be represented on these cards. This cataloguing is to be kept up daily and strictly. Thus, whenever another catalogue shall be required, instead of the wearisome and expensive process just completed, the work can be made ready for the printer at any time, at short notice, without disturbing the regular work of the Library, and at little expense besides mere transcribing.

Two books are also to be kept upon the desk of the Library as Accession Catalogues, in which all books hereafter added are to be entered; and these, with the present Catalogue, will constitute a complete record of every book in the Library.

The present Catalogue is substantially upon the same plan as the previous one, namely, an alphabetical list under names of authors, a classified index, arranged by subjects, and a separate list of novels entered in duplicate, under their authors' names and under titles. A somewhat smaller type than that of the old Catalogue, and a double-columned page, were adopted, and a considerable saving in bulk was thus secured.

The experience and knowledge of our late Librarian, Mr. Grant, have been of great service in the conduct of this very laborious and difficult undertaking; and our thanks are also due to the gentlemen who have assisted him in the manual labor of it, for the cordiality, industry and efficiency of their co-operation.
